

I'll take my chances on getting enough games from the second division to win with," is Mack's maxim.

Rube Oldring, veteran left fielder of the Athletics, who has been a factor with his bat in keeping the Mack-men in the American League race this year. He will be one of the main cogs in the attack of the Giants as planned by Connie Mack.

Both win, so where does the pop-eyed dope hold good?

Rain prevented the completion of the Giant-Cub schedule. Twenty-two games were carded, but the twenty-second can't be played, as there are no more open dates while the Giants are in the West.

McGraw gave us a sight of Al Demaree yesterday for the first time this year. Al is a Chicagoan, but he has not been allowed to pitch in his home town, for some unknown reason. It certainly was not because he is ineffective against the Cubs, as he has beaten them in New York, and only allowed one hit in the four innings that were torn off yesterday before rain cut the pastime short.

Johnny Evers is worried about the White Sox. This may sound funny to any American League managers but Connie Mack and Clarke Griffith, but it is a fact. The West Side boss is undecided what kind of pitching to shoot at Callahan's crew in the coming city series.

He has two left-handers of note,
